GRIFFS IN FRONT AFTER GAME FIGHT TO LEAD DIVISION

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.-The long fight of the Griffmen to move to the front of the second division finally has borne fruit. The place which the Yankees have occupied for some time past was stormed and gained by Griffith's team here yesterday, and this morning finds the Griffs holding fifth place by the margin of one game. They have two more on the card for today at the Polo Grounds, and they stand little chance of being ousted, as Walter Johnson is slated to work one game and Harry Harper the other. The probability is that Washington will enjoy a three-game lead over Bill Donovan's luckless out-lead over Bill Donovan's luckless outfit when another day dawns.

Superb pitching by Doc Ayers summarizes the first victory for Griffith's team here, and the hitting of Memoskey, Foster, and Morgan carried the visitors to victory in the second game.
They hit Shocker hard most of the way in the closing number, but with little success, as the fielders camped under or in front of many a drive that was ticketed for safe territory.
The break came in the eighth, when Peck made a poor throw, and after two lads reached the bases, Menoakey pumped a pretty double into right field, tying up the game. This hit carried the game into overtime, and in the eleventh hits by Shanks, Clyde Milan, Foster, and Morgan put the game out of the reach of the Yankees.

the same time to cover second on a throw from Ayers for an easy force play. Each stopped at the same time to let the other take it and the ball went on its way to the outfield.

As it was a perfect throw the error could not be charged up against Ayers and had to go against one of the infielders. Morgan drew the black mark from the official scorer.

Ayers a Real Puzzle. Avers was a real puzzle throughou the first game. He held the Yankee to six scattered singles, which wer distributed through five innings. H did some fine pitching in the fifth it ning, when Alexander and Mogridg opened with singles, and a slig fumble by Milan, put the runners of second and third bases, with none of It looked as if the Fankees woul It looked as if the Fankees would break up the same right here, but they did no such thing. The top of the batting order was duw to hit, yet Ayers got out of the difficulty with only one run charged against him—that on a short sacrifice fly by High But for the error by Milan, the Yankees undoubtedly would have taken a shut-out as their portion in the first kees undoubtedly would have taken a shut-out as their portion in the firs

More Good Pitching. In the second game Griffith go some more good pitching, first from Jim Shaw and then from George Du mont, who finished up the game mont, who intinued up the game. Shaw pitched seven innings and then went out in Washington's half of the eighth to allow Leonard to try a Squeeze play.

Gharrity was on third and Ain shith on first when Leonard bunter along the third base line. Bake raced in and made a quick throw to the plate, Gharrity losing the decision after a pretty silde. The Griff men put up quite a kick on the de men put up quite a kick on the d cision, which was a very close on and might have gone either way. Then Menoskey followed with the double which put Griffith's boys back in the game, and they held off the Yanks until the flock of base hits arrived in the eleventh.

Wash. Morgan, h. Shanks, i. C. Milanc.

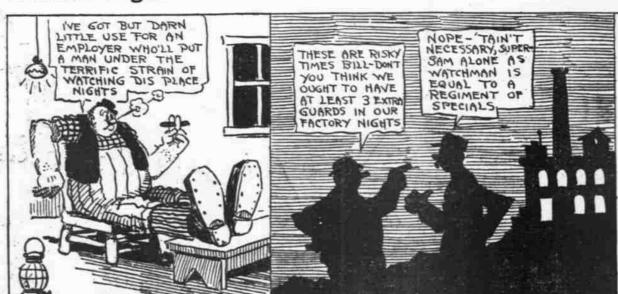

Dumont was in trouble in only one of the four innings, in which he worked. That was in the tenth, when Nunamaker and Shocker led off with singles, Caldwell replacing Nunamaker on the bases. Again the top the batting order was in line but amaker on the bases. Again the top the batting order was in line, but High, Gilhooley and Peck filed out in turn after High had falled to lay down a bunt. If High had sacrificed Donovan would have called upon Gilhooley, a good hunter, to lay down a slow roller and squeeze the winning run home. However, there was no chance for this play which has no chance for the play which had sacrificed because the play which had sacrificed the play which had

Morgan Barilliant.

Morgan played brilliant ball throughout the twin bill. He led his team at bat in the opener with three hits and in the second he got two drives for extra bases, one being a long hit into the left field seats, while the Yankees were enjoying a one-run lead.

Morgan's infield work also sparkled all the way. One error was charged against him, but this was due to a misundarstanding with Shanks. The two infielders ran all this course.

Watt was ineligible.

In a letter to President R. H.
Young of the association, Manager
Charles J. Diller, of the Truxtons, maintains that Watt is eligible; that he played in five games; that his name was not on the eligible list through an oversight.

Because of the fact that Diller released several players to the General Office team, he says Watt was recalled to play in the title series as he had played more than the stipulated number of games with Truxtons.

For the second time in the series
Truxtons and Marsons played a tie, yesterday's engagement being stopped in the seventh with the score 3-sile.

Corbett's Seventh Article Tomorrow In Sunday Times

James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, is writing a series of articles on self-defense for The Washington. Times. Corbett's articles appear every Sunday in The Times.

Uncle Sam appraciates Jim Corbett. The greatest heavyweight boxer the world has ever known will probably be made dean of a corps of the best boxers who will show the men in training in the national army just how to box. Shiftiness in boxing, co-ordination of brain, eye, hands and feet, is the same as the ability to deliver the punch in bayonet work at close range.

That's what Corbett is going to do for the national army. The Times' readers appreciate these Corbett self-defense articles. Les-son No. T appears tomorrow.
